CHANCELLOR FERRIS'S ESTATE. Widow's Suit to Not Aside Her Re-

tia S. Ferris, the widow of Isaac Ferris, formerly Chancellor of the University of the City of New York, had a suit on trial in the scial Term of the Supreme Court yesterday which she asks that a release of dower in er husband's estate, which she signed be set side, uron the ground that she did not fully derstand what it was that she had signed. Chancellor Ferris died in June, 1872. He i nine children, five by his first wife, three by the second, and one by the third. He left or the second, and one by the third. He left ome property in Roselle, and also a house in Vest Twelfth street. The entire management if the estate was left practically to Richard B. lerris, Vee-Freeldent of the Bank of New lork, a son of the Chancellor. Mrs. Ferris are that she signed a paper which she undergood was an authorization for one of the excutors to act in the management of the escutors to act in the management of the sawa, but she subsequently learned that it was awaiver of her dower right. It was stated that she had received but $1,000 from her husband's real entare.

Justice Ingraham refused to dismiss the complaint, holding that while no fraud was alleged or had been proven. Mrs. Ferris was entitled to full information about any deed which she might be called upon to sign, and wen if there was no fraud, if she had jeograded her interests by signing a naper which had not been fully explained to her, she could recover. Richard B. Ferris and A. H. Ludium, also one of the executors, testified that they had no recilection of Mrs. Ferris heing requested to surrender her right of dower.

Edward B. Bartlett's Will,

The will of the late warehouseman, Edward Bartlett of Brooklyn, has been filed for Probate. The schedule sets forth that the deteased owned no real property, and the entire ersonal estate, valued at $300,000, is left to Maria H. N. Hartlett, the widow, who is named as sole administratrix.

LAWYER ROESCH HIT ON THE NOSE. A. Mlatake Somewhere, but Mr. Receek the Only Man Injured,

Philip Schultheis was convicted in the Ewen Street Police Court, Williamsburgh, a week ago of keeping a policy shop at 19 Thames atreet, and Justice Watson sentenced him to four months in the Kings county penitentiary. Schulthels was taken to jall until he could be sent to the penitentiary. Yesterday Justice Watson received a letter from the District Atwarded the papers in Schultheis's case at once Schulthels would be taken before Chief Justice Clement in the City Court on habeas corous and probably discharged.

The Justice then discovered that through some means Schultheis had been kept in Raymond street jall instead of being sent to the penitentiary. James Cassidy, the jail van driver, told Justice Watson that he knew nothdriver, told Justice Watson that he knew nothing of the matter, except that he delivered schulthels to the warden of the jail on the day he was convicted and sentenced. Cassidy then went to the office of Lawyer-John Rossid, who defended Schulthels, and accused him of having given the Justice a cock-and-bull story about schulthels. Rossich indignantly denied that he had done so, and called the van driver a liar. Cassidy hit Rossich on the nose, and also knocked off his hat. Rossich went to Justice Watson and demanded a warrant against Cassidy.

The Justice sent for the van driver, and after telling him that Hoeseh had not furnished the Court with the information about Schulthels, advised Cassidy to applogize to Rossich offered an apology.

anology. It appears that after Schultheis was taken to jail from the Ewen street court, another law-yer whom his friends retained applied to Justice Clement for a writ of habeas corpus, which acted as a size, and therefore Schultheis could not be taken to the penitestiary until it was decided. The proceedings were before Justice Clement yesterlay, but an adjournment was granted. Schultheis was taken back to jail.

Charlotte Von Kurhann, His Breretary,

Charlotte Von Kuehnau, who had acted as a sort of Secretary to Coroner Michael Jean Bantiste Messemer for six years, and was with him when he died at Nice on Feb. 21 last, has filed a petition in the Surrogate's Court for the revocation of his will dated May 25, 1880, and for the substitution as his last will of one that she says he executed on Dec. 15, 1893, at Falckenstein. She says that the will she de-Falckenstein. She says that the will she desires probated made her a beneficiary, and named her and his brother, Dr. Edward J. Messemer, executors.

The will of May 25, 1889, was admitted to probate here on March 5 last. It leaves all Messemer's property to his brother. In the papers on which this will was admitted his personal property was valued at $6,000 and his realty at $5,000.

Carl yon Kuehnau, the father of the claimant, is said to be the proprietor of a restaurant in Chicago. Her mother has been living at 382 Second avenue, where the daughter had resided before leaving the city with the Coroner. She had also gone to Sarstoga with him before the trip abroad. HUSBANDS QUARREI.

Clarence Merring of 118 Cooper street, Wil-36 Shepard avenue, married sisters, the daughters of a farmer of Jamaica, L. I., on the same day about a year ago. The sisters saw little of each other afterward, but each frequently called on her parents. A few weeks ago Mrs. Merring became the mother of bouncing boy. Merring lost no time in sending the news to Briggs and his wife. Mrs Briggs envied the happy mother, but Briggs. It is said, didn't call at the house at all. Last Sunday Merring and his wife went to Jamaica to visit the old folks. They had the baby with them. They met Briggs and his wife there. During the afternoon Mrs. Briggs expressed a wish to see the baby, and she sent her hushand to an up-stairs room to fetch him down. Briggs, it is said, found Merring pacing the floor with the youngster.

He asked him to let him have it. Merring smillingly refused and, it is said, told his brother-in-law that he should first learn how to handle a baby before taking one down a flight of stairs. Merring laid the baby on a bed, and Briggslupbraided him for speaking as he did. This led to a spirited argument, which ended in Briggs striking Merring on the leftere. Vesterday Merring went to the Cedar street police station in Williamsburgh for advice. It is eye was discolored and swollen. The Sergeant directed him to Jamaica for a warrant. Merring told the Sergeant that Briggs was jeslous because he had no baby. Briggs envied the happy mother, but Briggs

Two weeks ago the Vice-Chancellor told her to go to her husthe Vice-Chancellor told her to go to her husband's house in Believille, and take up her abode in a room provided for her by him. She did not go, but made two visits to his office. He was not in at either time, but on the second visit she met him in the street in front of the office, and he told her to stay away from there and go to Belleville.

She said vesterday that she asked him then whether he really wanted her to go to his home, and he said that he did not. Mr. Burton arose in court yesterday and denied that he said he did not want her to go to his home. The Vice-Chancellor said that his instructions to her in the matter were plain, and she had not compiled with them. In consequence he dismissed the petition.
